Every year since 1982, the CWP has invited outstanding teachers from all disciplines and levels of instruction to participate in a Summer Invitational Institute on the Storrs campus. This Summer Institute provides teachers with the opportunity to study current composition theories, to share their expertise, and to compile their own original writing portfolio.

During the summer institute you will write every day, participate in peer response groups, revise your writing, share your knowledge and insights with other teachers, conduct graduate-level research, build leadership skills, and grow as teachers and writers.

Compensation
All participants will receive a $1,500 Aetna Fellowship and the option to earn six graduate credits in English.

Applications for Summer 2010 are due by March 22.

Required materials include a brief essay on your teaching philosophy, two letters of recommendation, and a resume.

For more information, visit us at www.cwp.uconn.edu, call (860) 486-2328, or email Director Jason Courtmanche at jason.courtmanche@uconn.edu or Kelly Andrews-Babcock at ab_crunch@hotmail.com.

2010 Summer Institute
“...where teachers come to improve their writing in order to improve the writing of their students.”